

ABSTRACT

The invention pertains to an incidence probe intended to measure the incidence of an air stream flowing outside a skin. The invention finds particular utility in aeronautics for measuring the incidence of an aircraft. According to the invention, the incidence probe comprises a body situated 5 outside the skin and means of measurement of a stress exerted by the air stream on the body.